Benjamin Dyson, the colored man charged with stealing $21.50 from Annie Prator, has been arrested in Omaha and brought here for trial.

Lizzie Robinson has been arrested for vagrancy and her case has been continued until Thursday next. It promises to develop some rather racy facts.

The Catholics are arranging for a Fourth of July celebration on the picnic grounds at Glendale, and the programme being provided is one of which will prove enjoyable to all citizens.

Mayor Bowman announces that he will have contribution boxes to-morrow at all of the polling places, that voters may drop in their mites for the relief of the cyclone sufferers. The boxes shall be generally remembered.

A brick house on Pierce street occupied by some dusky day was badly demoralized by yesterday's storm, the water undermining the house so that it almost took a tumble. The water rose so that it covered the house, ruining the carpets and doing much damage.

The Colored Men's Anti-Prohibition club met Saturday night in the Bee Hive block. Charles Curtis acted as chairman and made an earnest address. He also offered a resolution to the effect that the club should vote as a unit against the amendment. This was adopted, and speeches were made by Tom Buckner, Guerdon Crist and others.

The Council Bluffs club and their friends feel quite proud of the way the club showed up in the contest in Omaha Saturday afternoon with $22.25 for 25 cents at J. Mueller's. It is an advertisement of the Weber Piano, for which Mueller is agent.

A Wild Storm. The barometer which of late has given unfailing warning of approaching storms, was so down in the mouth Saturday evening that all looked for a possible cyclone, but none came. In its place yesterday morning came one of the heaviest thunder storms of the season. The rain fairly poured down, the wind blew, and the hail fell. The deluge of water showed plainly how many defects there are in this city's drainage, and many basements were flooded, low lots covered with water, and some of the streets became ponds, while sidewalks were set afloat, and foot passengers were compelled to wade in many places. The creek was on the rampage, and overflowed in the vicinity of the Metropolitan hotel, flooding much property. The wind broke some trees, and damaged the foliage in yards, but no serious trouble is reported.

The Union Consolidated Mining company, a home company composed of some of our best business men, have been quietly working in northeastern Utah, have just received word from their manager, O. M. DeKay, who is looking after the work at the mines, of such a nature as to make it necessary to send two of their best men to the front. If indications are half true, this company will soon take rank with the richest companies in the land. J. T. Hart, of the Empress hardware company, and T. B. Hays, of Hays & Glasgow, started yesterday, and when such men pull out for the front at a moment's warning, it means something more than play.

The work of naturalizing citizens is going forward lively. On Friday evening last Judge Aylesworth naturalized fifteen from the vicinity of Walnut, and on Saturday fifteen or twenty more were given their papers. He has already made about 75 citizens. It is stated that Judge Reed has made 250. Still more will flock in today. One of the intelligent Germans who has been in correspondence with all parts of the state, estimates that fully 50,000 have become citizens, while one equally intelligent abolitionist put the figures at 25,000. That this will have a great effect on the election to-morrow cannot be questioned.

The examination of the boys attending upon St. Joseph's school began today.

The exhibition of St. Francis' academy will begin next Thursday night.

Among the fresh drunks registered at the police station are James Russell and James Dingley, who will be heard to-day.

Another portion of the sewer on Broadway near J. B. Atkin's store fell through yesterday, making a dangerous hole.

The prisoners in the calaboose have to get along on two meals Sunday. Yesterday it was nearly 4 o'clock in the afternoon before the tin plates were brought in.

A second complaint was Saturday entered against John Snyder for obstructing a gutter on Frank street between Broadway and Pierce street. The complaint made some time ago was dismissed on the promise being made that the matter would be remedied, which promise it appears was not kept.

The Little company which visited this city recently were the victims of an awkward mistake in a Wisconsin hotel the other day. It appears that the landlord had been telegraphed to by a company of drowsy blonds who wanted accommodations, and had made up his mind to house the party out, as he did not keep that kind of a house. Unfortunately the Little company arrived a day or two late, and the landlord discovering the pronounced blond hair of 'Mile Little and Miss Nellie Bangs, he ordered them very peremptorily to seek other quarters. About the time that they were indignantly taking carriages to go to another hotel, the landlord discovered his awful mistake, and humble apologies and piteous pleadings induced them to remain.

GRAND CELEBRATION. Go to Sioux City July 4th on the Sioux City Special Train and enjoy the Horse, Horse and Foot races. $400.00 on foot racing alone. The Union Pacific Band of Omaha furnishes the music.

For sale at a bargain--30,000 choice seven foot fence posts, by Vaughan, at a reduced price.

PICKING A POCKET. Officer Cusick Drops Upon a Pair of Nimble Fingers at the Transfer.

Saturday at the transfer a passenger complained that he had been robbed of his pocket book. Officer Cusick at once recognized a fellow named William Copeland, whom he had caused to suspicion, and made him throw up his hands while he searched him. In opening his vest the pocket book dropped to the floor. The man who man the complaint declared that it was not the one he lost, but another man named Andrew Bowman stepped up and declared it to be one which had been taken from his pocket a few minutes before. It contained $18 and a ticket to Deadwood. The young man was accordingly marched to the police station and held for examination. He had been noticed hanging about the depot in company with another suspicious fellow known as "Rocky O'Brien." Search was at once made for the latter, but it was found that he had skipped across the river. Officer Morse was delegated to man to come over here, but he was too cunning to come. As a witness, he said he knew his rights, and if the proper papers were presented, he would come, of course, but otherwise preferred to remain in Nebraska.

It appears that the city made a wise move in stationing the officers at the transfer, who would not only report cases of delinquency but arrest offenders. Thus far the plan seems to be a big improvement over the hush-up-and-let-go way so long practiced there.

THE DREAD DISEASE.

More Effective Means Must Be Taken to Stamp Out the Small Pox.

The attempts to stamp out the small pox here have so far proved so ineffectual that there is a feeling among the citizens demanding some radical changes in the manner of caring for patients and quarantining. It has been hoped from time to time that the end had been reached, but it seems not. Another victim was taken to the pest tents Saturday afternoon, it being one of the former inmates of the old Sioux City house, where a case was allowed to remain until nearly all the occupants of the house were fully exposed. After the case was taken from that old building to the pest tent, the house was quarantined, nominally, for a time, until the citizens protested so vigorously against such a seat of pestilence in the heart of the city, that the authorities removed the inmates to a house on the bottom. The quarantine restrictions in neither case were closely observed, for the inmates went in and out, and moved about the streets, exposing others. Some escaped entirely, and are still at large. One of these, a colored man, skipped for Kansas City, and has since come down with the small pox there. Another one, a woman, kept away for several days, and then returned, and went again into quarters at the Sioux City house. Still again, after the inmates had been removed to the isolated house on the river bottom, one of them left that place and visited her sister, living on lower Main street. The officers went after her and took her back into quarantine again. Saturday last it was decided that the quarantine should be named, and this had scarcely been done before it became evident that one of the inmates, a young man, was already attacked by the disease, and he was removed to the pest tent.

The trial of the case of the state vs. Brown in the supreme court Saturday revealed further carelessness in the way the disease is being handled. It appeared from the evidence introduced that the persons employed as attendants at those who are confined from the disease themselves, and whose only qualification for caring for the sick is that they are not themselves liable to catch the disease. One of these, who is now the attendant, goes by the name of Charles Alley, John Alley, Allen and John Danford or John Charles Danford, and his own history of his life is in keeping with the changing of his name. Mr. and Mrs. Brown, who were there before him, seem to be badly mixed up in the doings by which the watch of one of the patients, who died, was sent out of the tent to the city, so that the police would not find out what became of it, and Brown is now on trial for stealing. With attendants of so little standing and apparently of so little qualifications as these, it is naturally to be believed that patients are liable to be misused or neglected, and there is no surprise at the number of deaths occurring at the pest tent.

The trial of this case in the superior court Saturday naturally alarmed the judge and the attorneys. Mr. Brown and his wife had lately been patients, and afterwards attendants in the pest tent. One young lady witness had also been a patient in the pest tent, and her face, hands and arms still wore the red blotches so plainly as to be seen across the room. Charles Alley, another witness, is the present attendant at the pest tent, and was anxious to get through his testimony so as to take another patient out of the tent, and expected to return to-day to give still further testimony, the case not being finished. This was, however, avoided by the attorney compelling to an agreement as to his testimony. The silver watch which belonged to Jones, who died of the small pox, was in court, and was handled in evidence, there being attached to it the same leather string which Jones had used for a guard. In fact this watch has been in circulation through the city for two weeks past. In fact everything connected with the trial of the case saved of small pox. It may be that there was no danger in thus gathering together relics and witnesses from the tented field of the pestilence, but there cannot but be uncertainty when it is evident that the disease is not being so quarantined as to prevent its spread, new cases arising weekly.

Still again, officers from the regular police force are employed in removing patients to the tents, and performing quarantine service at odd times, and then put on regular duty again. They are doubtless more careful in changing clothes and using preventatives than others, and yet the more persons there are who are exposed in attending to the disease, the greater is the liability of spread.

The authorities have been making child's play of this matter long enough, and it is time that such steps were taken as to slay the course of the disease. Where so many persons have more or less to do with the tents and with the patients, it is not strange that some one of them through ignorance or carelessness should expose others.

MORE FROM MAINE. To the Editor of the Bee.

We are all interested in personal testimony concerning the working of the prohibitory liquor law in Maine. I enclose some extracts from a letter received from a gentleman whose boyhood and youth were spent in Maine, who has spent many years abroad, in wine drinking countries, and who since his return to this land has resided part of the time in Maine, where he was active in support of the law and in its enforcement. His testimony is that of one of wide experience of men in vastly varied circumstances, as well as of one personally acquainted through many years with the home life and the social condition of the state of which he speaks.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, June 23.

"The temperance men and women who live in Maine will all tell you that the Maine law is an inestimable blessing to nine-tenths of the state, in the farming population the use of alcohol is almost finished. The law will grow more stringent instead of relaxing, I have been in many parts of the state, and I know whereof I affirm that farmers like the law. They confess that it has regenerated Maine. It was once the most drunken state in the union, it is now the most temperate. The houses were unpainted, windows broken, fences down, poverty marching on. Now the houses are painted, shade trees abundant, roads good, school houses reconstructed, general thrift apparent. Farmers themselves attribute the change to the Maine law. I can bear testimony to all this from personal observation, but there are a few places of which Bangor is chief, which defy the law. It is a disgrace to the law or Bangor? Bangor was always a great rum town. The whole Penobscot county of which it is the chief town was always full of rum. In the great and flourishing lumber business everybody could drink and everybody drank. It is admitted they drank up every pine tree in their magnificent pine forests. Rum is in the blood, it will take generations to get it out. The Maine law will stand in Maine. It grows strong in the conflict. The secret sale is prosecuted with infernal art and diligence. But it will be more and more hunted down. I was told that in Portland liquor was sold in 140 places. I could not find one of them. I went into a suspicious looking saloon and had my dinner. I was an absolute stranger, but I failed to get a drop. The "boss" told me it didn't pay. I do not deny that tipsters know how to get it. It is not open. It is not easily found except in quantity as imported. I could buy a barrel where I could not buy a glass. Any one can buy as much as he pleases at the importers in original bulk or packages. The fact has been transubstantiated into free and open sale. The Maine law cannot touch the United States law. It is the drum shop it aims at.

The Departing Pastor. A reception for Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Cleland will be held at the residence of Mrs. Caleb Baldwin, Tuesday evening, June 27. The ladies assisting are Mrs. George F. Wright, Mrs. James Porterfield, Mrs. Thomas O'Brien, Mrs. P. C. Daryl, Mrs. William Robinson and Mrs. J. T. Baldwin. Owing to the shortness of time intervening, it will be impossible for these ladies to call upon the many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Cleland in the church and in the community, and they therefore take this method of extending a very cordial invitation to all friends to be present on this occasion. Should a storm arise on Tuesday evening the service will be postponed until the following evening, Wednesday, June 28th.

PERSONAL. F. Cash, Esq., has returned from Lincoln.

Miss Wright, principal of the grammar department of the Bloomer school, has left for Binghamton, N. Y., intending to visit in St. Louis and other cities on her way home.

W. B. Reed, one of the transfer forces, who has just returned from a trip to Utah, brings glad tidings concerning J. F. Kappes, who formerly lived here and is widely known and well remembered by many. It appears that Mr. Kappes has "struck it big" in one of his mines about 110 miles south of Salt Lake City, and that there is every reason to believe that his fortune is made, and a very handsome one, too.

J. T. Hart and T. B. Hays started westward Saturday, on receipt of some very encouraging news from some of the mines of the Union Consolidated company, in which they and other of our citizens are interested. It is stated that an eight foot vein of very rich ore has been struck in the Backhorn mine on their Convent claim. These gentlemen will be absent a month or more.
